<WHAT DO YOU LEARN FROM THIS LECTURE SERIES?>

You will learn a new way of understanding human emotionality and family as a whole which interact to each other inevitably. You can adapt the theory to your daily performances and your clinical practices. This evolving new thinking can apply to organizational systems such as corporation, hospital, school and even government.

<WHO SHOULD ATTEND>

Anyone who wants to learn about family. Especially psychiatrists, doctors, psychologists, caseworkers, teachers, judges, etc.)

INTRODUCTION OF FST

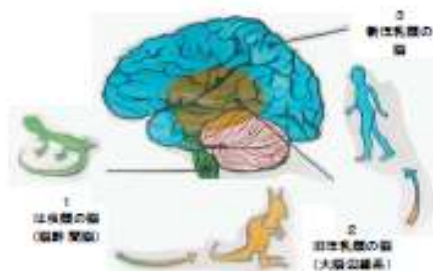

"The human is a mixture of feelings and objectivity. He has evolved a brain that enables him to know the differences between the two, if he is motivated to know the differences. The well-differentiated person knows the difference, and each can be more fully appreciated when each is relatively free of the other. There is an advantage when the human can observe the automatic emotional process with his intellectual self."

Murray Bowen (p. 368, Family Evaluation)

LECTURER

Ryuko Ishikawa, M.D.

Psychiatrist and President; Family Center Japan

Dr. Ishikawa is known internationally and one of the few psychiatrists licensed to practice in the USA and Japan. Her professional career has been established by training and research at several well-known psychiatric institutions such as Stanford University (Residency training,) George Town University at Family Center (Family Psychiatry under Prof. Murray Bowen) and University of California at San Francisco (Child Psychiatry.) Also received scholarship at Yale Department Psychiatry (FFRP) After she was trained by Prof. Bowen, she established Family Psychiatry based clinical practice in Tokyo, Japan. Since August 2003, she does practice at Family Center Japan (clinic-Shinryo Naika, Psychiatry) in Ginza to see many international and Japanese clients. She consults to corporates and hospitals using organizational theory as well as training physicians and psychologists. Please visit:
